

Abstract

This thesis is the study of women sellers life in the market city at Wongwien-Yai area which I chose as the social context. The objective is to showing the life of them in holistic especially in the pattern of economic and household roles in order to understand the relation of it.

From the study I found that at Wongwien-Yai market area, there are two different groups of women-sellers that the one who stay inside the market and the another one stay outside on footpath as vendors. The two groups of women sellers have many different conditions of commerce such as the side of selling place, timing to sell, the kind of goods, ethno graphy of them, economic status and useing of labor. These things made them both show the economic role and the process of economics difererently too. However they still have some of the same condition which is the degree of education, the reason to be women sellers so they may have to made decision in similar. InSpite of the diferent of economic role influenced to houseshold role in both of women- sellers but still diferrent in the division of labor, mother role, wife role.